

Information Security Leaders
Expanding your influence

DONOVAN
LEADERSHIP

“

The CISO can do everything right and still lose their job.

”

A recent report, ‘The Security Team of 2020’, prepared by Trusted Impact highlighted the increasing leadership challenges being faced by information security leaders. The report highlighted the need for Chief Information Security Officers and their leadership teams to build greater influence with their key stakeholders.

If you are a senior information security leader, you may face the following challenges:

- ❑ Meeting the rising expectations of business units, C-suite and board
- ❑ Balancing the demands of day to day critical issues with the expectation that you will play a more strategic role
- ❑ Struggling with the challenge of increased cyber security threats with the constraint of reduced resources
- ❑ Transitioning from being a technical expert to a people leader

Then you may be interested in the Donovan Leadership information security leadership coaching program to take your leadership to a whole new level

“

CSOs must be organizationally skilled– in carving out the security budget, in influencing other verticals within the company, and in earning the trust of top executives.

”

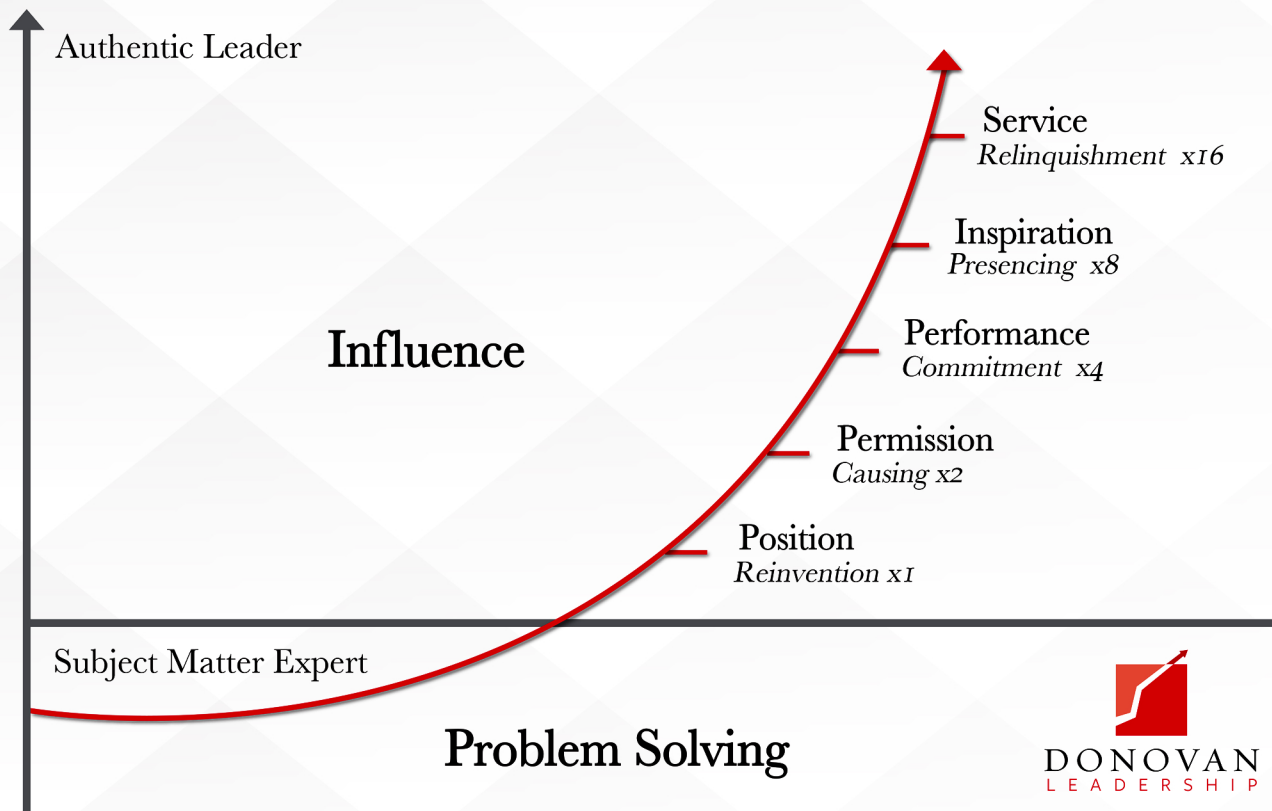

Extract from
The Rise of the Chief Security Officer: What It Means for Corporations and Customers
Forbes 20 April 2015

Donovan Leadership is responding to the leadership development needs of this critical group. New-school information security leaders recognise they must expand their influence.

We are offering an executive coaching program aimed at building the influence of senior information security leaders.

We will work with you to map your current level of influence and develop a program to move you further up the influence curve. See the model below.

By participating in the Donovan Leadership information security leadership coaching program the following outcomes are available:

- ☐ Deliver business results in six to nine months beyond what you thought was possible
- ☐ Expand your influence and build your brand as a game-changing leader
- ☐ Strengthen your ability to communicate with your key stakeholders
- ☐ Cause your team to step up their leadership
- ☐ Inspire others to take action on your vision and strategy

What does the Donovan Leadership information security leadership coaching program include?

Phone and email support

Coaching program – 12 x 1hr sessions over 6-9 months

Meeting with next level manager to agree on objectives

Review session with you and next level manager to debrief on results

About your facilitator

Brian Donovan is the founder of Donovan Leadership. He is a dedicated advocate of powerful and practical leadership. His commitment to the field is informed by 40 years' experience in the technology sector, as a senior executive in Telstra and as CEO of the IT Skills Hub. He is an executive coach, facilitator and speaker.

He has helped countless technology leaders transform from technical experts into leaders who succeed. He is able to draw from his practical experience as a senior executive to assist his clients to build their influence with their key stakeholders. His programs enable leaders to achieve stretch results and to make the difference they are committed to making.

Donovan Leadership has a client list that reads like a roll call of Australian industry's best and brightest.

Contact

Contact Donovan Leadership for a no obligation leadership diagnostic and further details about how the program could support your career objectives.

Brian Donovan +61 418 552 723

www.donovanleadership.com
brian@donovanleadership.com

DONOVAN
LEADERSHIP